Seeds of Compassion Youth Ambassador Program

MISSION: To mentor a diversified group of students with the intention to inform, inspire and motivate youth to participate in the “What Does Compassion Look Like” campaign.

VISION: To develop a group of students ambassadors that will carry the torch of the “What Does Compassion Look Like” campaign to their respective communities. Middle and high School youth throughout King County have committed to the “compassion in action” team through community service, team building and various leadership development training.

YOUTH REPRESENTATION: The Youth Ambassador group consists of a multi racial ethnic and religious group of students residing throughout King County. Students celebrate diversity by learning about each of their respective cultures and traditions. The students have been meeting since November on a weekly basis and hope to continue for a lifetime! They’ve shared so many beautiful moments together. The hope is to foster and build cultural competence. The students celebrate diversity by embracing “the other” through respect and an opening of the heart. The program allows for youth to step out of their respective communities and experience the richness of a diversified city. It encourages the new generation to honor differences and recognize similarities while becoming responsible global citizens. The students are committed to positive change in themselves and in their communities.

The students are of African American, Iranian, Jewish, Muslim, Mexican, Japanese, Oromo, Tibetan, Nepalese, Senegalese, Ethiopian, Chinese, Caribbean, Biracial and Native American backgrounds.
